

Evidence Axis - LemonLime Evidence Appendix

Checked 26 Aug 2026. This appendix supports the revised complimentary brief. It intentionally removes the weaker findings and keeps only claim-level evidence used in the deck.

Method note

Claims are separated as FACT, INFERENCE, or UNKNOWN. Founder comments and Product Hunt reviews are used only as context or buyer-question prompts, not as headline findings. If a claim comes from a competitor page, it is treated as that competitor's public narrative, not as verified truth about LemonLime.

Source register

ID	Source	Use in deck
S1	FullGTM comparison page: https://fullgtm.ai/compare/lemonlime/	Main external competitor narrative and total-cost framing.
S2	LemonLime current public pages: https://lemonlime.com/ and https://lemonlime.com/pricing	Current offer context used to contrast against third-party narratives.
S3	Synchronise AI homepage/pricing/customer story: https://synchronise.ai/	Vertical specialist overlap with wholesale-sales workflow.
S4	Product Hunt LemonLime page: https://www.producthunt.com/products/lemonlime	Supporting signal only: one public review names Make/n8n; not treated as market statistic.
S5	LemonLime About: https://lemonlime.com/about	Broad claim about ChatGPT/Claude training on conversations and files.
S6	LemonLime Knowledge: https://lemonlime.com/knowledge	More qualified internal explanation of commercial OpenAI/Anthropic handling.

Claim register

Claim	Classification	Evidence basis	Limit / use
FullGTM has a live comparison page dedicated to LemonLime.	FACT	S1. The page is indexed and presented as FullGTM vs LemonLime.	Use as competitor narrative, not neutral market analysis.
FullGTM reframes LemonLime from $999/month into a broader $21,801/month stack and compares it with FullGTM at $4,000/month.	FACT about FullGTM claim	S1 reports “LemonLime + rest of the stack” at $21,801/month and $261,608 over 12 months, versus FullGTM at $4,000/month and $48,000 over 12 months.	Do not treat FullGTM assumptions as verified truth. Treat as a public buyer-facing objection.
FullGTM asserts LemonLime does not cover web operations, press/backlinks, managed deliverability, and only partially covers content.	FACT about FullGTM claim	S1 side-by-side table and explanatory sections.	Action item for LemonLime: refute, correct, or accept in response messaging.
The strongest risk is not stale plan names; it is a public total-cost story that could shape buyer perception.	INFERENCE	Based on S1 cost model and S2 current offer.	Should be framed as a narrative risk, not proof that buyers believe it.
Synchronise is a narrow AI wholesale-sales product for consumer brands.	FACT	S3 states it finds retailers, drafts outreach and follow-ups, and waits for approval.	Not a full LemonLime substitute.
Synchronise overlaps with a visible LemonLime workflow: wholesale buyers / retailers / outreach / approval.	INFERENCE	S2 current GTM positioning and S3 product workflow.	Use as vertical-specialist pressure, not “same product for less.”

Claim	Classification	Evidence basis	Limit / use
Synchronise Growth pricing is A$120/month monthly or A$100/month equivalent annual.	FACT	S3 pricing lines.	Currency and billing term must stay attached.
One Product Hunt reviewer names Make and n8n as alternatives.	FACT	S4 public review context.	N=1. Supporting signal only. Not a headline finding.
About and Knowledge give different levels of nuance on ChatGPT/Claude training claims.	FACT / consistency issue	S5 has the broad claim; S6 gives the more qualified commercial-product treatment.	Frame as internal consistency cleanup, not a legal accusation.

Finding 01 - FullGTM total-cost narrative

The revised brief should lead with FullGTM's total-cost model, not with old tier names. The competitor page matters because it turns LemonLime's $999/month entry price into a broader operational stack story. That is the part a founder can act on immediately: answer it, correct it, or change the public comparison frame before prospects internalize it.

Deck wording guardrail

Allowed: "FullGTM is publicly selling a total-cost narrative against LemonLime that puts the combined stack at $21,801/month under its assumptions." Not allowed: "LemonLime really costs $21,801/month."

Capability claims to verify directly

Managed deliverability; web operations; press/backlinks; content cadence/on-request drafting; and the old Starter/Team seat packaging shown on a page marked as verified on 31 July. If these claims are wrong, the comparison page is a correction target. If they are right, they are a response roadmap.

Finding 02 - Synchronise vertical pressure

Synchronise is not framed as a full LemonLime substitute. Its value in the brief is narrower: one visible LemonLime GTM workflow has already become another company's whole vertical product. Synchronise provides retailer sourcing, buyer research, drafted outreach and follow-ups, approval control, pricing, and a customer story.

Deck wording guardrail

Allowed: "A narrow specialist is productizing one workflow LemonLime uses to explain its broader GTM offer." Not allowed: "Synchronise does the same thing as LemonLime for A$120."

Supporting signal - buyer reference-class question

The Product Hunt review naming Make and n8n stays as a supporting signal only. It should not be presented as something the founder does not know. Its role is to justify a buyer-question checklist: when buyers evaluate LemonLime, do they compare it against AI software, an agency, an employee, or doing nothing?

Removed from headline findings

Removed item	Reason
Founder/Product Hunt architecture comments	A finding sourced from the founder's own comment is not a gift. It may be internal context only.
Sintra/Lindy price comparison	No current claim in the deck rests on them. They are omitted instead of kept as dead sources.
Broad Terms/Security inconsistency as main finding	Useful as context, but weaker than FullGTM and Synchronise.

Limitations

This brief does not verify FullGTM's cost assumptions as market truth. It verifies that the narrative exists publicly. It does not claim that Synchronise is feature-equivalent to LemonLime. It does not use stale LemonLime plan names as the core finding; old packaging is included only as a concrete correction target on the FullGTM page. It does not infer buyer behavior from a single Product Hunt review.

Suggested next engagement ask

A focused engagement can map which comparison pages and vertical substitutes are shaping LemonLime's buying frame, test the reference class against recent opportunities, and produce a response map for sales copy, landing pages, and competitor pages.